

Four Tips To Finding Cheap Flights To Hawaii

If you are like everyone else, you are looking for cheap flights to Hawaii, right? Millions of tourists like you flock to the Aloha state to take in the best surf, underwater adventures and the most romantic getaway in the Pacific! It's true, the Hawaiian Islands are far away from anywhere - but that's part of their unspoiled charm. They're over 4,000 miles away from Japan, 5,000 miles away from China, and 2,400 miles away from the mainland. It takes between 5 to 10.5 hours to fly to Honolulu from the domestic cities in the U.S. While several airlines fly daily to Honolulu and some directly to Maui, the constant demand for air tickets make finding cheap flights no easy task. Further, a vacation in this tropical paradise sounds good just about any time of year - but, of course, is more tempting during the winter break. Whether you want to celebrate the New Year in style or simply escape the cold outside your door, you should know that this is the Hawaiian peak season, when the flights cost the most.

Regardless of when you decide to come, a tropical escape can be really expensive, so you must really find a good deal. The plane tickets are the biggest chunk of your vacation budget and if you can keep the cost of travel down, you'll be ahead of the game!

Here are four tips that help you save a lot:

1. Find Cheap Flights to Hawaii for the Off-peak Season

The best time to find good Hawaii travel deals is during the off-peak season, which falls during the spring and fall months. Fares drop after mid-April until mid-June and then again from September till around mid-December. But keep in mind, the islands become very busy with Japanese visitors during the last week of April - the "Golden Week", a long stretch of Japanese national holidays.

2. Get Cheap Flights to Hawaii When You Book in Advance

If you know you will be traveling 2-3 months down the road, book your flight now, you will save a lot! Why? Because airlines want to sell seats as soon as a flight goes on sale. However, if you're booking at the last minute, there are still some things you can do that will help put dollars back into your pocket. For example, rather than flying into a major airport, consider using a smaller airport instead. Flights from and to smaller airports are much cheaper than those that leave from and arrive at larger international airports.

3. Find Cheap Flights to Hawaii When You Fly During the Week

If you book your ticket on a weekday instead of the weekend, your ticket will be cheaper. Leaving on a weekday may be tricky if you have a full-time job, but if you can get away from work, it would certainly be worth your while.

4. Get Cheap Flights to Hawaii with Vacation Packages

This is one of the best ways to get cheaply priced airfares. Bundle air, accommodation and car rental together for a substantial discount. For example, Hawaiian Airlines, Hawaii's own airline, offers various pre-packaged Hawaiian holidays - or, you can build your own.

You will love flying with this airline! Hawaiian Air services 20 domestic and international destinations and its cabin service, which is imbued with Aloha hospitality, consistently wins top ratings from Condé Nast Traveler and Travel & Leisure, two of the biggest travel magazines.

Planning a holiday so far away from home can be stressful and shopping for cheap flights to Hawaii is no exception. But if you take advantage of these four tips, you will be able to find cheap airline tickets to Hawaii to fit your vacation budget.